Current Project

The Political Life of a Sacred Text: The Talmud, Citizenship, and Jewish Identity in Modern Europe. Book project, which focuses on three, related, cultural behaviors of the turn of the century: Gentile discussions of Jewish sociability and morality from the perspective of rabbinic texts; Jewish responses to this questioning of rabbinic culture (in the form of apologetics, court challenges, and self-distancing); and social practices of reading, study, and transmission. Were Jews indeed the “people of the book,” and what did this imply about their status as citizens?
